

Ruth Gaare Bernheim

Ruth Gaare Bernheim, JD, MPH is the director of the Division of Public Health Policy and Practice, School of Medicine and associate director of the Institute for Practice Ethics and Public Life at the University of Virginia. She directs the MPH degree program and teaches courses on public health policy in the medical school, law school, and college. She serves on Virginia's State Pandemic Flu Advisory Board and works on health department projects on health disparities. Ms. Gaare Bernheim previously was on the faculty of Johns Hopkins Hospital Ethics Committee. Her education includes a law degree from the University of Virginia, an MPH from Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health, and a certificate in mediation from Harvard School of Public Health. She is a c faculty affiliate of the Kennedy Institute of Ethics.