

Amy Pulver

Amy Pulver is Associate Director for Policy Planning and External Relations in CDC's Division of STD Prevention. She is member of the Division's senior management team and is responsible for directing the policy office including analysis of legislation for STD prevention and surveillance programs; identifying key policy issues evaluating alternatives and making recommendations for policy action; developing new opportunities or changes to policy to further the Division's mission; initiating and maintaining relationships with outside partners to further STD prevention.

In addition to her work at CDC she has over 20 years of experience in development and implementation of public policy at the state local and national levels in the areas of public health environmental affairs public land use and urban growth and development.