

Susan E. Sherman

Susan E. Sherman is a Senior Attorney with the United States Department of Health and Human Services Office of the General Counsel. She has been with that office since 1990. She currently works on legal issues related to emergency preparedness and response including hurricane preparedness influenza planning and development of countermeasures against agents of bioterrorism. She previously worked on legal issues related to research grants administration human subjects protection animal welfare stem cell research and scientific misconduct. Prior to attending law school she worked at the National Academy of Sciences' Institute of Medicine on "The Future of Public Health" and "Improving the Quality of Care in Nursing Homes" and for the Maryland State Health Department. She holds a law degree from the George Washington University National Law Center a master's degree in health science from the Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health and a bachelor's degree from Vassar College.